Health Information Management

Manage More Than Information
Prepare to advance your HIM career in as few as 18 months with our CAHIIM-accredited online Health Information Management (HIM) Bachelor’s degree program.¹

The program is offered online with virtual lab course work, hands-on professional practices and experienced faculty members who are committed to your academic and career success. You’ll build on the technical knowledge of Associate’s-level courses to gain management skills that prepare you for a variety of health information leadership roles, in positions such as a data quality manager, health information manager or meaningful use specialist.

Gain Key Skills
Through career-focused curriculum, you’ll gain relevant skills employers seek, including:

- Management of Health Information Systems—Skills that allow you to design and manage health information systems in order to develop and implement information policies.
- Diverse Knowledge of Healthcare Settings—Understand financial management and analysis within multiple healthcare settings.
- Professional Communication and Confidence—Establish communication skills that promote effective collaboration with administrators, clinicians and financial decision-makers.

Flexible Learning Options
Our Health Information Management Bachelor’s degree program is offered with Flex Choice®, which allows you to take self-directed assessments alongside your traditional courses to earn your degree with more flexibility and affordability.

Certification Exam Preparation
You’ll be prepared to take the Registered Health Information Administrator (RHIA) exam, with the help of industry-experienced instructors and program coordinator guidance along the way. According to AHIMA, individuals who have an RHIA credential hold potential for advancement to management positions.²

Accreditation
The online Health Information Management Bachelor’s degree program at Rasmussen College is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Health Informatics and Information Management Education (CAHIIM):
