

Get to Know Our Doctor of Physical Therapy Program

Help people feel, move and live better with a Doctor of Physical Therapy degree from Rasmussen University.

You'll complete our hybrid program in two years, experiencing the best of online courses, in-person learning and comprehensive clinical education.

For 20-plus years, Rasmussen University has been a leader in online learning and innovating higher education.

We have the expertise to make your virtual courses engaging and worthwhile —whether you're at home or checking in from your phone.

Our curriculum features competency-based education to help you develop skills key to a successful career in physical therapy.

You'll explore the full spectrum of patient management through real-world experiences, mirroring what you'll do in the field.

Feedback between you and your faculty is on-going,
giving you frequent opportunities to absorb and master the material.

So, you won't just be learning to pass a test.
You'll be working to transform into a well-rounded, confident clinician.

To put your online learning into practice, you'll travel to the Twin Cities in Minnesota five times throughout your program.

Along with your cohort, you'll participate in residential immersion labs lasting 6 to 11 days each.

You'll work closely with your faculty to further develop your practical skills as well as clinical reasoning and decision making.

Finally, you'll complete 30 weeks of clinical education under the guidance of physical therapists.

With clinical locations across the country, we'll help you look for opportunities to gain diverse experience.

Our faculty is dedicated to mentoring you throughout your doctoral program. Given our innovative program model, we attract outstanding educators from around the nation—giving you direct access to their knowledge and mentorship.

You'll also have the chance to meet students from different states, expanding your professional network of people just as passionate about physical therapy as you are.

All along the way, you'll have the support of our team including:

- Graduate Services Advisors to guide you from start to finish,
- Graduate Librarians to help you with research,
- 24/7 tech support, career advisors, and more.

Plus, you'll have your cohort and faculty to lean on day-to-day.

As you learn to help others at a higher level by becoming a health advocate and thought leader in physical therapy, we're here to help you.

To learn more about this program, you can sign up for a DPT information session.